Commission Doesn't Plan Closing Of Local Waters In 1942 Fishing Season

Dunbar States No Licenses Will Be Issued To Nationals Of Enemy Countries Under Current Ruling of Fish and Game Commission.

Disproving many and varied rumors concerning the restriction of fishing in this district during the season, which opens here May 1, H. R. Dunbar, chief of the bureau of licenses writes that "the California Fish and Game Commission contemplates no closures of hunting or fishing."

There may be certain areas, Dunbar wrote, in reply to an inquiry by Mrs. Hazel Lewis, which will be closed by either the federal authorities or the U. S. Forest Service, but so far as the commission has been advised, fishing will be permitted in the Truckee and Lake Tahoe region.

Further inquiry relative to issuance of licenses to aliens, even those who have acquired their first papers, Dunbar replied: "...a ruling of the Division of Fish and Game some time ago was to the effect that no citizen of an enemy country, which we consider as Germany, Japan and Italy, would be eligible to purchase a license."

However, he added, this matter is subject to change and the commission is awaiting a decision by the attorney general in regard to the matter.

A press release from San Francisco has this to say:

California hunters and fishermen will not be excluded from combat areas, according to information received by the State Division of Fish and Game from Army headquarters. Such exclusion applies only to enemy aliens and to American Japanese.

Night fishing and the building of fires on southern beaches has been prohibited as a safety measure. Trespassing is forbidden near domestic water supplies by Army regulation. but with these exceptions and special security orders that may be issued by local commanders for the protection of their sectors, hunters and fishermen will not be excluded from combat areas unless they are closed by the U. S. Forest Service on account of fire risk.

We have attended numerous meetings throughout this region, but none offer us more wholesome pleasure than our occasional visits to the H and W Philanthropic Club of Meeks Bay. Throughout the session only friendship and harmony are evident as neighbors from various locations on Lake Tahoe gather to discuss club affairs and enjoy an evening of good fellowship. This country could use a lot more gatherings like the H and W sessions, and a lot more citizens like those who go to make up the group.

Speaking of organizations, we are happy to report that from indications the financial drive sponsored by the Truckee Chamber of Commerce and carried out through the efforts of Committeemen Langille, Shattuck and Sanders, is going over in a big way. Only in most isolated spots was the answer negative when principals were approached for rather large donations. This evidence of faith in the chamber is inspiring and we believe the directors will see that value is received by everyone participating in the program.

There are still many among us who staunchly believe that tourist and vacation business this summer will reach a low ebb. They may be right but on the other hand it is just as safe to assume that they are wrong. From the President down, workers are being urged to take time off from their strenuous efforts to play and enjoy vacations. If these suggestions are followed out, and we sincerely believe they will be, where can be found a better place to rest and enjoy the natural wonders of Nature's finest play ground which is the great Truckee-Tahoe-Donner recreationaly area? At any rate, let's make a strong bid for this business.

TRUCKEE INVADED BY JAPS IN MASS EXODUS EASTWARD

Truckee underwent a Japanese invasion Saturday and Sunday as the last days for Japs to leave the prohibited zones under their own free will rolled around. Hundreds of the alien and American born Japs passed through here en route to inland states. They were checked out of California by officers of the state highway patrol who estimated that nearly 1,000 passed through here on Sunday alone.

Highway Patrol Is Reorganized Here Under Placer Chief

Sub-Office of Patrol Will Be Established Here For Greater Efficiency.

The California highway patrol has announced the consolidation of varisou districts in Northern California for administrative purposes.

Included in the consolidation program will be all of Placer County, Meadowlake Township and portions of Washington Township in Nevada County running along U. S. Highway 40 and from Sierraville in Sierra County, north to Truckee.

Captain Charles LaPorte of Roseville will be in charge of the district although a substation will be located in Truckee with a sergeant in charge of the local squad.

Captain Joe Blake of Hills Flat was recently assigned to have charge of the western section of Nevada County, all of Sierra County except the above and Camptonville Township of Yuba County.

The redistricting was recommended and met with the approval of state and local officials who are making an effort to bring about a better system of policing in the state.

It was not definitely announced which sergeant would be located here to have control of the Truckee-Lake Tahoe district. The plan will give Truckee the long sought office where licenses may be renewed and other work which heretofore has required trips to Roseville or Hills Flat (near Grass Valley). It should prove a real boon to local motorists.

PRECIPITATION IS OVER NORMAL

March Total Is Slightly Below Par

Precipitation at Truckee during March totaled only 1.77 inches, or 2.38 inches below normal for that month, according to records kept by District Ranger H. I. Snider of the Tahoe National Forest. The precipitation at Truckee, however, totals 27.96 inches since September 1, which still leaves an above normal total for the rainy season of 7.22 inches as of March 31.

On March 31, Snider skied from Lake Tahoe near Brockway to Truckee, repairing the forest service telephone line, and reports about four feet of heavy packed snow on the Brockway Summit, while the road in Martis Valley has only about one foot of snow on it.

This trip, Snider said, was one of celebrating recovery of his skiing facilities as it was just a year ago on that date that he suffered a broken ankle while on a snow survey rip and was marooned in a shelter for two weeks 15 miles south of Donner Summit, during which time snow storms hampered the work of rescue parties. An airplane was employed to drop food between storms to Snider and James Wheeler, who was detailed to stay with the injured ranger. Snider had set the broken bones as soon as the accident occured and they mended in good condition.

CHAMBER DRIVE IS SUCCESS AS PLANS GO FORWARD HERE

Directors of the Truckee Chamber of Commerce met yesterday to hear a report from the finance committee comprising H. T. Langille, V. C. Shattuck and O. H. Sanders and it was revealed that more than $1100 has been collected and pledged during the first few days of the drive.

With this favorable report, the directors have decided to proceed with the program as outlined last fall with alterations where necessary to meet a more ilmited budget. The program will be started immediately following the next meeting, probably early next week. It is planned to have a chamber meeting prior to May 1 when the fiscal year will commence.

The details call for a full time secretary to handle routine correspondence and other matters pertaining to the booster group. More detailed plans will be announced after the next meeting.

EDITORIAL

APRIL—25 YEARS AGO

This month of April, in 1917, was mighty exciting for Americans. On April 6 we declared war on Germany. The Germans scoffed at us. We were wholly unprepared, they said, and that was the truth. But they told us our best would be too little and too late—as they are telling us now.

Yet just exactly one year seven months and five days after April 6, 1917, the enemy surrendered before a gigantic host of hard-hitting Yanks, on November 11 of 1918. Let's remember that in these times, when enemy propaganda tells us we've started with too little too late. We're only into this war four months. Wait until one year, seven months and five days of it have passed! We did it before and we WILL do it again!

VICTORY OR DEATH

The fighting spirit which is the core of victory has been sounded in the ringing words of General Douglas MacArthur. Addressing the Anzacs in Canberra's Parliament House, he affirmed "as a soldier in a great crusade", that "we shall win or we shall die. My faith in our ultimate victory is invincible. I bring to you tonight an unbreakable spirit of free men as opposed to perpetual slavery. Under this banner the free men of the of the world are united to death. There will be no compromise."

As strategist and patriot, General MacArthur has seen this war as a contest between two irreconcilable systems, in which quarter will neither be asked nor given, in which compromises will neither be extended nor accepted. This is but recognition of the facts. Our enemies, by brutal deeds and frank boasts have ong declared there is no room in the world for both the democracies and the "New Order."

General MacArthur sees the struggle for what it is. No one to mince words, he has sounded the battle cry of the United Nations: "We shall win or we shall die!"

by LYTLE HULL

There is a saying that "money alone won't win the war." This is true—but money and men will win it. By "money" is meant those things which money creates—materials.

Ever since this war started our side has been handicapped by a scarcity of the materials of war—airplanes, tanks, etc. Practically every major engagement which the enemy has won has been the result of a preponderance and superiority of equipment. Our complaint has been "too little—too late."

Now the time is approaching when we will be on a par with our enemies as to both materials and men. And it won't take long after that when our armies will be larger and better armed than the enemy, and backed by much greater reserves of both men and arms.

If the U. S. were planted in the middle of Europe, it would be quite a different matter, for the reason that our factories also would be continually under fire; or in dire need of basic materials, or in danger from invading armies.

"The Arsenal of Democracy" is an appropriate term for this country. As soon as our factories are going at full blast on war materials alone, they may be grinding out as much fighting equipment as all the rest of the world combined: and if the Germans and the Japanese can win campaigns with a preponderance of men and materials—we can do the same. Unless this war develops airplanes which can fly 10,000 miles without refueling and thus be capable of harrying our efforts or unless we relax to such an extent that we lay ourselves open to inasion—we will be able to exceed in production anything our enemies could even dream of. Practically our only danger would be the saboteur—and he never gets very far. He may destroy a few planes and a few factories; but half a dozen lamppost executions would soon put the fear into the most daring.

There is nothing new in all this; wars are practically always won by the side which can continue pouring in the greatest number of men and the greatest amount of weapons. The smaller and less rich participant may cut a deep swathe in the early stages—particularly when he has prepared himself and when his bigger enemy has not. But as time goes on the smaller opponent uses up his best men and his best material and finally the day arrives when he must "carry on" with second rate soldiers and insufficient and low grade armaments. The German armies which marched into Russio were more formidable than those same armies are today—and before the impending "spring campaign" is over, the difference will be even more pronounced.

The big, rich side can always win if it can "take it" and keep plugging away. However, it will win so much the sooner if the people have faith in its management and call a halt on unconstructive criticism for the duration.

THE MAN AT THE KEYHOLE

by OPERATIVE WB

The first qualification of a candidate for high state office in this year of war and priorities, our waggish sleuth reports, is a good set of tires. The situation is so critical, in fact, that candidates for governor are threatening to put on a streamlined version of the famous Lincoln-Douglas debates, with several rival aspirants sharing the same car as they travel from town to town and knock each other from pillar to post. The boys won't even dare to cut corners on each other; they've just got to conserve that rubber.

Shoemaker, stick to your last. If you're a bricklayer, lay your bricks; if you're a grocer, peddle your groceries. But don't think that just because you're a patriotic American you should raise a "victory garden"; unless you know your onions it's a reckless waste of seed. And that's straight from the fellow with the whiskers; yes, that's right—your Uncle Sam!

Father Riker of Holy City, who is running for Governor on a platform of "Let's Have Our Heaven on Earth", announces he will pay a reward of $25,000 to any citizen who can find a flaw in his assertedly perfect system of government. There's a catch in the proposition, however, Father Riker insists he would have to be elected governor and given a chance to demonstrate his system before his plan could be fairly judged.

'How Green Was My Valley' Will Show On Sund'y

The dramatization of Richard Llewellyn's best-selling novel, "How Green Was My Valley," is brought to the screen by 20th Century-Fox under the production genius of Darryl F. Zanuck. Here is the film that has been eagerly awaited and from the accounts of preview audiences, it promises to fulfill the expectations of the most discriminating motion picture fan.

The keynote of this production which is due at the Donner Theater here Sunday, is the fidelity of its portrayal to the novel of the same name. Laid against the colorful background of a Welsh mining village "How Green Was My Valley" brings to life the dynamic characters who captivated the over five million people who read the outstanding book.

Seen through the eyes of the youngest member of the family—Huw Morgan—"How Green Was My Valley" traces the threads of life of the Morgan family over a period of years—revealing their trials and loves, their joys and sorrows. It's the brave story of a family never conquered, not by armed me or hardship, hunger or hate—nor by the turbulent years that stole the greenness from their Valley.

The featured cast is said to take able command of the opportunity to knit together a story that demanded highly specialized dramatic ability.

Walter Pidgeon, cast of Mr. Gruffydd, the minister, is said to cap his career with splendid performance. Beauteous Maureen O'Hara portrays Angharad, the lovely Morgan daughter, who captivates the pastor. Anna Lee in the role of Bronwen is modest and loveable—the epitome of womanhood, whily Donald Crisp as Gwilym Morgan, the father, is firm yet kindly.

Young Roddy McDowall, the 12-year-old English actor whose ascent to stardom has been spectacular, portrays the role of young Huw—shy, impressionable and courageous, full of faith and hope.

A carefully chosen supporting cast includes John Loder as Ianto, one of the Morgan sons, Sara Allgood, as the loveable mother, Barry Fitzgerald as Cyfartha, one of the villagers, and Patric Knowles in the role of Ivor, another of the Morgan sons.

An almost unbelievable amount of money and lobar has gone into the production of "How Green Was My Valley." 20th Century-Fox created a replica of a Welsh village, the most elaborate and costly of its kind in the stduio's history.

The musical background of the film has caused considerable comment. Faithfully the orchestra under the able musical direction of Alfred Newman has integrated the charmingly haunting melodies that play such an important part in the lives of the Welsh people. The music has been reproduced from tunes never before recorded and presented a difficult task to the producers of the picture.

Director John Ford is responsible for welding the film together into a dramatic unity that is a tribute to the great novel of a simple people Philip Dunne wrote the original screen play.

MY PLACE IN THE SUN

by DOUG BARKETT

This may seem pretty petty, but I think it's high time something was done about the youngsters riding their bicycles on the sidewalk of Commercial Row. This is a dangerous business, I know—I used to do it. Those bikes are not always under the control of their riders, especially if they are riding hard and fast. It is—to say the least—an inconvenience to people going from store to store or from store to post office to have to dodge in out between a half a dozen bikes. To the smaller children it is not only inconvenient, it is dangerous. This practice on the part of the boys is going to have to stop or somebody is going to get hurt and somebody else is going to be sorry.

A back issue of the American magazine states that it is against the law for horses to wear cow-bells in Tahoe City. I wonder if Contable "Handsome Harry" Johanson has been called upon to apprehend any offending dobbins recently and what penalty has been imposed if.

No use both of us losing sleep over it: Grate up a pound of red cheese, season with pepper, add a teaspoonful of dry mustard and a dash of cayenne. Put this into a skillet, add four beaten eggs, a tablespoonful of cream or rich milk, and beer; also a lump of butter the size of your thumb, a spoonful of chopped parsley and a dash of Worcestershire. Stir this over a low flame until the cheese is melted, then pour over a square of buttered toast.

EASTER GLADNESS

"Let us sing of Easter gladness
That rejoices every day,
Sing of hope and faith uplifted;
Love has rolled the stone away."

Is not the true message of Easter one of gladness? The daily remembrance of that first Easter Day will uplift hope and faith to rehearse this message of man's immortality, rekindling in men's hearts the spirit of "Easter gladness."

Jesus of Nazareth fulfilled his Christ-like mission among men. He brought practical proof of the efficacy of uplifted faith, and he answered that age-old question of all men, "Is man immortal and life eternal?" Every act in his earthly ministry became a living text, restating afresh the basic message of the Christ (John 10:30), "I and my Father are one."

His mighty works continued to inspire the hearts of men, to resurrect all mankind from earth-bound theories and beliefs. Not only did Christ Jesus raise the dead, but he also brought renewed life to those who were buried in mortal thinking. For to believe that man is mortal, man-made, sinful, sick, dying, is to seem to be so, while to behold man as deathless, spiritual, Godlike, is to experience resurrection. The "I" to which Jesus continually referred is the divine nature eternally expressed in man, the Christlikeness or scientific relationship which forever exists between God and His idea. . . .

In "Miscellaneous Writings" Mary Baker Eddy writes (p. 154), "It is the purpose of divine Love to resurrect the understanding, and the kingdom of God, the reign of harmony already within us." What a glorious Easter Day dawns when we discern the true resurrection—"the reign of harmony already within us"!

The world today appears dreary and drab for many. Never before has there been a more urgent need for "Easter gladness" within the hearts of mankind. . . .

What if the evidence of the senses points to helplessness, futility, defeat, frustration! Those were the same arguments repeated centuries ago, when he who was known to the world as Jesus of Nazareth was in a tomb working out for all the world the truth of man's immortality. Angels were to roll away the stone from before that tomb and Christ Jesus was to step forth, a living answer to the argument of mortality, to the world's fear, ignorance, and sin.

Speaking of "our angelic messengers" in a marginal note, Mrs. Eddy states on page 299 of the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures": "My angels are exalted thoughts, appearing at the door of some sepulchre, in which human belief has buried its fondest earthly hopes. With white fingers they point upward to a new and glorified trust, to higher ideals of life and its joys." Unnumbered men and women throughout the world have been delivered from entombment in the carnal mind sepulchers of fear, ignorance, and sin. "Exalted thoughts" of God's presence and omnipotence have rolled away those stones of false belief, uplifting hope and faith to behold man's oneness with God.

How tenderly Jesus reassured his disciples of the eternal relationship between God and man when he said (John 14:2), "I go to prepare a place for you"! He was assuring them of the certainty of resurrection and ascension for all who follow in his footsteps, however dark the human way may seem. Their hearts must have queried: "Where is our beloved Teacher going? To what place?" Those questions were to remain unanswered for a time. But the promise he gave brought them comfort; many times angels were to deliver them and they were to prove for themselves something of "Easter gladness."

Jesus' disciples had to learn, as all must likewise do, that the ascension of Christ Jesus did not consist of the one moment when he passed from their sight. On his ascending thoughts they must learn to model their own. In the spirit of Truth and Love, which the Christ expresses, there remains forever that which prepares men's hearts for acceptance of the kingdom of God within, for acknowledgment of their place in the "Father's house." This is the eternal benediction, "I go to prepare a place for you." Our recognition of the meaning of these words gives us something of the true gladness of Easter. —The Christian Science Monitor.

CHAPTER 11

I quit kidding myself then. I knew I'd give anything to have it back. what I had pulled at the party that afternoon. It wasn't brave, it wasn't big, it was just plain silly. I had made a jackass of myself and put something terrible between me and Doris. I began thinking of her, then and knew that it didn't make any difference what she had done to me or anything else. I wanted her so bad it was just a terrible acne, wanted her worse than ever. And here I was I had no wife, I had no home, I had no kids, I had no work, I didn't even have Cecil. I had just made a mess of my life. I think I hit an all-time low that night. I never felt worse. I couldn't.

The next day I took a suite at a hotel in the fifties. I took it by the month. I didn't hear anything from Doris. I began reading the society pages after a couple of days, and she was in. Every time I saw her name I saw Leighton's. On the singing, I never opened my trap. One day a guy showed up at the office by the name of Horn. He kept looking around kind of puzzled at the drafting room and in a minute I asked him pretty sharp what he wanted.

"You're Mr. Borland? Mr. Leonard Borland?"

"Yess, I'm Leonard Borland."

"I'm looking for the Leonard Borland who sang with the American Scala Opera Company under the name of Logan Bennett. Anyway, I hear he did."

"Where did you hear that?"

"I was in Pittsburgh last week. I heard it from a friend of mine. Giuseppe Rossi."

"Well? What of it?"

He knew he had the right guy and kept looking me over. "I'll tell you what of it. I'm connected with this new outfit that's giving opera over at the Maxim Theater and—"

"Not interested."

"I need a baritone."

"Still not interested."

"If you're as good as he says you are, I could make you a pretty nice proposition. I could offer you $125 a night with three appearances a week guaranteed. That's a little more than Rossi was paying you, isn't it?"

"Yeah, quite a little."

"Well—will you think it over?"

"No."

"I got a couple of good tenors and another one coming. I got a couple of good sopranos I think are comers But in an opera you've got to have one good baritone before you've got a show."

"You certainly have."

"All right, then, I'll come up a little. How about $150?"

"Maybe you didn't understand what I said when you came in here. I appreciate what you say. I'm grateful to Rossi, but I'm just not interested."

The idea of singing made me sick. He went, and I put on my hat and engaged in my favorite outdoor sport. about that time. That was walking around the opera house hoping I'd see Cecil. A couple of days after that I did see her. I raced back to my office as fast as I could get there and put in a call for her at her hotel They said she wasn't in. I knew she wouldn't be. That was why I had been watching. I leftw ord that Mr. Borland called. Then for a week I stuck at my desk, hoping she would call back. She never did.

All that, what I've just been telling you, was in the last part of November. When he first of December came it crossed my mind it was funny no bills had been forwarded to me. On the third I found out why. When I came downstairs in the morning the clerk called me, and he had my check in his hand, the one I had given him for my next month's room rent. It had bounced back. I blinked at it, and I knew then why there hadn't been any bills. Doris was paying her own bills. The money was in a joint account, in her name and mine, and she had drawn every cent of it out, started an account somewhere else, and there I was.

I said there must be some mistake and I would see him that afternoon I went out, and hustled over to Newark and borrowed $300 from a manufacturer of power shovels we had done some business with. I got back just in time to get in the bank, so I could cover over the check before they closed; then went back and told the clerk it was all right, I had drawn on the wrong account, and he could put it through.

I went up to my suite and counted my money. I had $75 over what I had deposited in the bank. My expenses, over the $170 a month I was paying for the suite, were about $50 a week, not counting club dues and other things I couldn't stave off very long. I was just about a week and a half from the bone yard, and I began to feel it again, that thick rage against Doris and the way she treated me. It would suit her fine, I knew, to have me coming to her begging for money. I walked around the suite, and after a while something in me clicked. I began to think about oHrn and the Hippodrome and his $150 a night

Next day he called up: "Mr. Borland?"

"Yes?"

"This is Bert Horn again. Remember?"

"Oh, yeah. How are you?"

"All right. Listen; my other tenor got to town last night. Fact of the matter, I stole him from Rossi. Guy by the name of Parma. You know him?"

"Yeah, I sang with him."

"Listen; if you're as good as he says you are, I might raise the offer I might up the ante to $200."

"Now you're tlaking. Come on over."

He came and looked me over again and the place over again, and then he laughed and shook his head.

"You play?" I asked.

"Some kind of way, yes."

"Come on up."

I took him up on the third floor where the piano was, and opened the windows and shoved the "Traviata" aria in front of him. He played it and I sang it. When I got through he nodded. "Guess they weren't kidding me."

We went down again, and he got down to cases. "How many roles do you know?"

"Three."

"Just three?"

"Marcel, Germont and Rigoletto. I sang one other role, but it was a pinch-hitting job and I wouldn't know it now if I heard it."

"What role was it?"

"Wagner in 'Faust.' I don't' sing French but they let me do it in Italian. They shoved it at me in the morning, I sang it that afternoon and had forgotten it by night."

That made the same impression on him it had on the others. An opera impressario, he's a little like a baseball manager. He knows all about smoke. He gets that every day. But a guy that can come out of the bull pen and finish a ball game, that's different. When he heard that he quit worrying, and began to lay it out what I'd have to do. The hitch came over the guarantee. With just those three operast, he couldn't make it three times a week, because they weren't giving "Traviata" on a weekly schedule. He wanted me to get up "Trovatore," "Lucia" and "Aida", and then later "Don Giovanni," and they would revive it if they thought I was right for it.

I said I couldn't get up that many roles by the end of winter if I had to sing three times a week, too.

So then he had a different idea: "All right; we'll say "Lucia" and "Trovatore," but get "Pagliacci" up by next week, and then we can put you on three times. You see, ham and eggs is once a week, too, and—"

"What is?"

"Ham and eggs. 'Cavalleria Rusticana' and 'Pagliacci,' the double bill. 'Pgliacci' you can get up quick. After the 'Prolouge,' which I suppose you konw, you have almost nothing to do, just two real scenes, not over 10 minutes of actual singing altogether. Then we can—"

"Oh. All right, then."

"You'll need a coach. I recommend Siegal. He's a good man, works with us."

"Fine. I'll take him. When do we start?"

"Next week. Get 'Uagliacci' up by then, and then later we can work you in on the others. But we want to bring you out in 'Rigoletto.' That makes you important."

So by that afternoon, I had connected with Siegal, and was back in the same old groove. I found out then how much Cecil had been giving me for nothing. Do you know what that bird took? He charged me $25 an hour, and I had to have every day. I had to borrow $200 more in Newark and it was an awful crimp in my $600 a week. But at that, $450 was nothing to be sneezed at.

I asked for a rehearsal on "Rigoletto," with three or four of the choristers. In the scene before the courtiers there was some stuff I wanted to do, and I had to make them slam me down so I really hit the deck, so when I came crawling back to them I would really be on my knees. They told me to come over to the theater.

When I got there, I walked out to the middle of the stage, let out a couple of big ones, and it felt pretty good. I stuck out my chest. I thought how I was putting it over on Doris and how I wouldn't come begging her for anything.

The conductir, Gustav Schultz, was at the piano, and we went through it. I think he wanted to look me over. I showed them how wanted them to heave me, and after a while they got it so it suited me. When we quit, I saw Parma in the wings and went over and shook hands.

"Hello, boy, hello. How'sa old kid?" he said.

"Fine. How's yourself?"

"O. K. Say, is swell, how you do this scene. Alla baritones run for bedroom, make little try, audience alla time wonder why he don't get in. Look like he must be weak. Ought to fight, just like you do 'em now and then, pow!—down he go just like this."

He threw hiss houlder at me, and I went head over heels onto the floor. It was one stage I didn't expect. Then he laughed. Singers, they are a funny breed. They've got what you might call a rudimentary sense of humor, in the first place, and they're awful proud of their muscles in the second place. People think they're soft. Well, singing doesn't come from the spirit. It comes from the belt and it takes plenty of chest to do it right.

I go up and laughed, and he and Schultz and I went out and had a drink...

The afternoon of the performance I put off lunch till three o'clock and then went out and had a good one. I came back to the office and vocalized my voice. I cameu p quick and felt good. I was beginning to get nervouse. They all get nervous but this was different from what I had felt before. It had a little tingle to it. I felt I was good. I walked up to the hotel and it was about half past four. I lay down and got a little sleep.

It seemd funny to be putting the make-up on without Cicil bobbing in to give me the double O, but I got it in place, and put on the funny clothes, and tried my voice. It was still up, and was all right. Horn came in, looked me over, and nodded "The contracts are ready."

"You got them with you?"

"My secretary's bringing them over. I'll be in with them after the show. How do you feel?"

"I feel all right."

POLITICAL PARADE

WALLACE WARE IS FIRST GOP TO ANNOUNCE FOR GOVERNOR IN '42 CAMPAIGN

Wallace L. Ware, Los Angeles attorney, this week was the first Republican to announce his candidacy for the governorship this year. Ware is seeking both the Republican and Democratic nomination in the August primary.

Born in Santa Rosa, the latest candidate is 50 years old. He received his education at University of California and Cumberland Law School in Tennessee and his father's law office. He is a World War I veteran and former assistant district attorney of Sonoma County and city attorney of Santa Rosa. Ware was a member of the California Railroad Commission from 1933 to 1938, and was a member of the California Civil Service Commission. For two years Ware was chairman of the former and wrote the famous "Santa Fe Decision" and other nationally recognized transportation decisions. His home address is 2656 Aberdeen Ave. Los Angeles, Calif. He has a wife two daughters and a son.

In his platform he is opposed to the secondary boycott and hot cargo and to the forty-hour work for the war's duration. He favors extension of civil service and reduction of state taxes on real property.

SAM YORTY IS CANDIDATE FOR DEMOCRATIC NOD IN PRIMARY ELECTIONS IN 1942

SACRAMENTO —(U.P.)—Governor Olson is going to attend a big political rally in southern California this week and many insiders believe he may choose that time to reveal his candidacy for reelection, or at least give that inference. To date, Olson has been keeping mum and letting his friends in the Democratic movement promote their "draft Olson" campaign.

With only Gordon Garland and Robert Kenny having announced their campaigns, former Assemblyman Samuel W. Yorty, Los Angeles Democrat, has announced he will make the race. Yorty was an also-ran for United States Senator in 1940 and won't upset the dope this year but his peppery statements will liven up the campaign, particularly on the labor subject.

Yorty accused "confused 'pussyfoot' politicians" with concealing their motives and urged imposing the same discipline upon war workers at home that is imposed upon those who have donned a uniform.

He said it was not necessary to "beg for cooperation" from labor or management when soldiers could be shot if they did not attack when ordered. "Why should we deal so drastically with part of our military machine while feebly requesting a gang of stupid, brazen and high handed labor misleaders to unfasten their grasp upon a vital part of our military organization," he said.

LOCAL CONGRESSMAN LIKELY TO HAVE NO OPPONENTS ON BASIS OF PAST RECORDS

by CLEM WHITAKER

Speaking of congressmen, four members of the California delegation —two Republicans and two Democrats—have such enviable records that they will probably be unopposed when the stand for re-election, according to current indications.

The "Big Four" are Congressmen Clarence F. Lea of Santa Rosa (D), chairman of the powerful Interstate Commerce Committee; Harry L. Englebright of Nevada City (R), the GOP whiy and House authority on mines and mining; Albert E. Carter of Oakland (R), a member of the House Appropriations Committee who has been to the fore in getting allocations for California war industries, and Alfrde J. Elliott of Tulare (D), a comparative new-comer whose rugged aggressiveness has won him a standing in the House which many members wait years to attain.

BREAKDOWN SHOWS BULK OF CONGRESSMAN ARE LAWYERS

..Public interest in the men who make the laws led to an unofficial survey of who did what before coming to the Capitol.

Results show that among the members of Congress 310 are attorneys 50 are businessmen, 34 are farmers. 34 are editors, 27 are real estate and insurance men, 17 are professors and teachers, 14 are doctors and dentists 10 are investment and banking men five are engineers and 14 have devoted their careers to public service

Picture Story of U. S. Flag

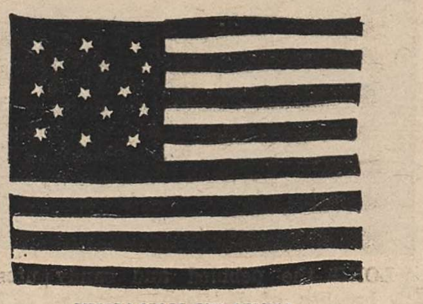
THE FIRST STARS AND STRIPES



FIFTEEN STARS AND STRIPES

This is the first Stars and Stripes. The Continental Congress on June 14, 1777, resolved: "That the thirteen United States be thirteen stripes, red and white; that the Union be thirteen stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation." According to legend the five-pointed stars were designed by Mrs. Betsy Ross.

With the admission of Vermont and Kentucky to the Union two stars and two stripes were added to the flag following an Act of Congress in 1794. It was a flag of 15 stars and 15 stripes over Ft. McHenry that inspired Francis Scott Key to write "The Star-Spangled Banner." Congress in 1818 restored the original number of stripes.

WOMEN in the NEWS

by Janet Cupler

WOMAN of the Week: Queen Elizabeth of England has set a gallant example by her courage, her strict economy and her willingness to observe rationing like everyone else. She buys no new clothes. With the rest of her family she has moved from Buckingham palace into a small apartment. When King George visits air raid shelters, hospitals and bombed sections of London, she goes with him. Occasionally she and King George go to a movie. And when she is forced to spend time in a shelter, she knits constantly.

LAND ARMY: In Washington, D C., the American Women's Voluntary Services recently registered women for enlistment in a "women's volunteer land army." Those registered are eligible to attend classes conducted by the University of Maryland extension service in the fundamentals of gradening, poultry care, dairying and probably the operation of farm machinery.

NEW LABELS: Housewives are advised to look carefully at the labels on sheets and pillowcases. By a new ruling of the Office of Price Administration which became effective in March, "seconds " or sub-standard articles must be so marked by the manufacturer. Miss Helen Sorenson, assistant professor of household management in the Univerity of Illinois college of agriculture, points out however, that in some cases this label may be removed before the articles are sold.

MORE AMBULANCES: Here's good news. According to Mrs. Florence C. Barrete, director of the midwest chapter of the British American Ambulance corps, the Office of Production Management has issued priorities to that organization for 300 ambulances to be used throughout America.

FACTS ON FIGURES: The typical woman industrial worker is between 5 feet 2 inches and 5 feet 7 inches tall. She weighs not less than 110 pounds and not more than 165. She is not left handed and has a broad thumb. At least those are the figures arrived at by Mary Stuart Anderson, state administrator of the NYA in Illinois, where the NYA conducts 49 "work experience centers."

WOOL GARMENT CARE OUTLINED

With a limited supply of wool in sight, the people of Nevada and eastern California, a wool producing section, were urged by Lena Hauke of the University of Nevada agricultural extension service to take good care ow their woolen garments.

Several ways of conserving wool garments were passed on to Nevadans by Miss Hauke as suggested by the U. S. Department of Agriculture's bureau of home economics.

"Keep up the appearance of a wool garment, and you prolong its life. Brush wool cots and dresses thoroughly after each wearing. Hang garments on hangars as soon as you take them off. If you, can allow a garment to hang a few days after one or two days of wear. The 'rest' lets the wool spring back in place reduces the amount of pressing needed.

"Hang wool clothing out to sun and air occasionally. Sun kills moths as well as their eggs and larvae Ordinary dry cleaning also kills omths. So does a washing in a neutral soap.

"Never iron wool. Steam press it. You can od this with an ordinary iron and two press cloths—one of wool, the other of linen or firm cotton.

"Spread the wool press cloth over the material you are pressing. Over this spread the second press cloth Dampen the second cloth with warm water. Press by setting the iron squarely on the top press cloth, lifting it, then etting it down again. Do not lean heavily on the iron and never let the iron get hot enough to scorch the press cloth.

"After you've pressed over all the cloth, lift the press cloths and beat out the team left in the wool, either with the palm of the hand or a special clapper made of sanded wood. Never press the moisture completely out of the wool. If you do the material will look much pressed and lifeless. After you have pressed the garment, hang it up carefully to dry."

Do not use the finger tips to sprinkle water on any kind of material, Miss Hauke said; always use a cloth or sponge.

In this way only can you be sure of an even amount of moisture and a flat well-pressed garment, she believes.

"When presisng material, be sure to lay it straight on the board if it is supposed to be straight when finished," the extension worker said

"Avoid laying a seam, a plait, or a hem on the board in a curve if you expect it to come out straight It will be a curve that will stay if it has been steamed in."

SIX INCH SERMON

REV. ROBERT H. HARPER

Christ and Life After Death (Easter) Lesson for April 5: Mark 12: 24-27; Corinthians 15: 50-58.
Golden Text: I Corinthians 15:57.

"Who knows anything about that?" So somebody asked concerning future life. Confucius confessed his ignorance of life beyond the grave. Happily we are not left to our own efforts to learn of eternal life—it is revealed in the New Testament.

Th Sadducces tried to entangle Jesus with a subtle question. He at once disposed of them with a statement concerning spiritual relationships beyond the grave. Then He declared that God is the God of the living and not of the dead. At the burning brush God spoke of being the God of men long dead. This showed that they were living still—in the perfect life.

Paul writes of the certainty of endless life and of its nature. It is spiritual life. With spiritual bodies we shall be freed from the limitations of time and sense. Some ministers read with mournful accents Paul's words, "Oh, deata, where is thy sting?" They should rather be read in exultant tones as a cry of victory through Him who has robbed death of its sting and stripped the grave of its power.

Let us indeed thank Good "who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." It is more than victory over physical death. Without he hope of overcoming sin, eternal life would be a greater tragedy than eternal death. But eternal life brings the blessed possibility of moral resurrection to every man. So amid the constant wrecking of material things, let us have the assurance that our lives are not being lived in vain here

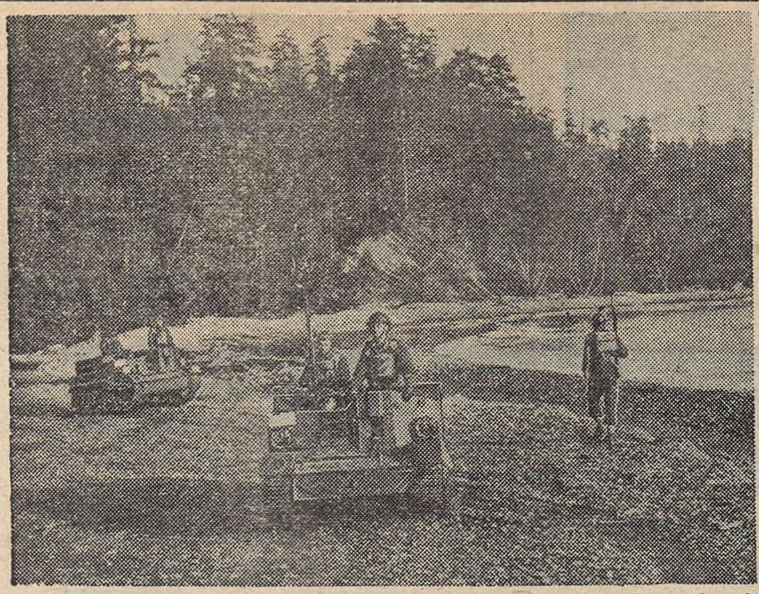
SENTRIES PATROL PACIFIC COAST



ALONG the pebbled and sandy beaches of British Columbia, where thousands of Americans have enjoyed vacations, the Canadian army now maintains a ceaseless patrol. Thousands of men, with their faces turned westward keep vigil from sentry posts, while up and down the beaches, Bren Gun carriers rumble on patrol, night and day. Under Canada's system of voluntary enlistment for service anywhere in the world, every two minutes of every day since the outbreak of war, a man has volunteered and has been accepted for service in Canada's Navy, Army or Air Force. Such enlistments now exceed 400,000. This number is supplemented by the men called up under Canada's draft system for national defense. After these men are given four months' training, they are detailed for duty with the army in Canada until the end of the war. Any draftee has the right at any time to volunteer for service outside of Canada and thousands have taken advantage of this privilege.

WOMEN URGED TO SEW, KNIT FOR LOCAL RED CROSS

Mrs. Melvin Hayes announced this week that local women are urgently requested to contact the Red Cross at the Wyethia Women's Club on the afternoons of Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday for wool to make garments for service men and material to make clothing for children On Wednsday between two and four a session is held for the women who wish to remain for the work.

She explained that the material is cut and that the knitting an sewing may be taken home to complete and then returned to the club house for distribution. The knitted articles are to be sent to service men. Twenty sweaters and one scarf went to Fort MacArthur recently and the childrens garments will be put in a store house for distribution in case of a disaster when such help would be necessary.
